

WAIMANALO Keywords: Empty, Live-with-the-Land, Happiness

Waimanalo is deeply rooted in its laid back rural “local” culture. Residents enjoy daily strolls along what is known as “the longest stretch of sandy shoreline on Oahu”. Inhabitants of this town are able to grow their own produce to sell in the local market, where locally caught seafood is also vended. There are no hotels in Waimanalo, which makes this area more “country” and less populated.

The majority of the residents of Waimanalo are local Hawaiians (“Pacific Islander”), who work within the area. Children attend Waimanalo Elementary and Intermediate School that is located across Saint George Parish, along Kalanianaʻole highway. Weekend barbecues and fairs are usually held near Bellows Air Force Base, which is also known to be a family -friendly camping ground and fun-filled bodyboarding destination. Local food destinations, such as Serg’s and Big Country Bar & Grill, attract both tourists and other Oahu residents to the content, rustic atmosphere that is known as Waimanalo.

LANIKAI Keywords: Full, Manipulate-the-Land, Profit

Located in Kailua (Windward side of Oahu), Lanikai is considered the most prestigious of neighborhoods. This residential community provides its inhabitants with illustrious homes against a breathtaking view of the Pacific Ocean. Children are able to appreciate their picturesque surroundings, while attending Lanikai Elementary Public Charter School, which is recognized as a Hawaii Distinguished School. Adults and adolescents are able to enjoy snorkeling, hiking, stand-up paddleboarding, and other numerous outdoor activities, all within a convenient distance of their homes.

Lanikai is also a premier destination for many visitors. Pure white sand and crystal blue water are only two of the reasons why this neighborhood and its residents are envied by others. Some of these luxurious houses are owned by successful businessmen and politicians. Modernly designed homes rival that of those found in Architectural Digest magazines. Private hot tubs, fully-automated household amenities, and surround-sound speakers in every home theater make living in Lanikai a most plethoric and utopian experience.
